COPPER SHOALS FARM RAISED RED DRUM FILLETS (skin-on, boneless)

Red Drum is a wildly popular game fish, from Florida to Mexico, and these anglers know what a great eating fish it is as well. Copper Shoals Farms of Texas sustainably raises Red Drum, also known as Louisiana Redfish, outside of Port O'Connor, on the Gulf Coast of Texas. Jim and Vicki Ekstrom oversee this family business, carefully monitoring all stages of growth. The result has been a high-quality Redfish that is leading the comeback of this excellent fish to menu's around the country. The fillets will weigh 1 to 1.5 lbs.

HAWAIIAN OPAH LOINS (boneless, skinless loins taken from the top rack)

The Opah, or Hawaiian Moonfish, season is in full swing. Opah's pink to reddish flesh is firm, with a high fat content. It has found great success in sashimi applications and is especially suited to grilling. We are getting our Opah flown to us daily from Oahu off the F/V The Seeker.

"NEW" CHILEAN SEA BASS CHEEKS (100% useable, skin-off, boneless)

Chilean Sea Bass Cheeks are a byproduct of the whole Chilean Sea Bass. The cheek meat is taken from either side of the head of the fish, are boneless/skinless, and look similar to a Sea Scallop. These cheeks will vary in size and are not "sized." The versatility of the cheeks allows for many creative applications from pan-searing to poaching and pair nicely with other proteins for a very cost-effective alternative to higher priced Chilean Sea Bass Fillets.
